

Friday, November 16, 2007

Alberta Wilderness and Wildlife Trust
Annual Lecture & Awards

Sleeping with the Enemy – Is Safe Sex Possible?

With Dr. Ian Urquhart

Money – what environmental group ever has enough? Today the search for this lifeblood may tempt environmental NGOs to partner with corporations in order to secure the resources needed to try to influence public policy and corporate behaviour.

In this year's lecture, Dr. Urquhart considers whether those who take this course mortally wound the authenticity of their policy critiques and what alternative tacks may be available to the conservation community.

Dr. Ian Urquhart has taught in the Department of Political Science at the University of Alberta since 1987. When he is not chasing trout in Alberta's foothills, he studies the politics of resource exploitation in Alberta. He is the editor of Assault on the Rockies: Environmental Controversies in Alberta (1998) and the co-author of The Last Great Forest: Japanese Multinationals and Alberta's Northern Forests (1996). Among his other publications is "Making It Work: Kyoto, Trade and Polecats," a research report published in 2002 by the Parkland Institute at the University of Alberta.

Location: AWA Hillhurst Room, 455 12th St. NW

Wine & Cheese Reception: 6:00 p.m.

Lecture & Awards: 7:00 p.m.

Cost: $25

Reservations: (403) 283-2025

Toll-free 1-866-313-0713

Online at www.AlbertaWilderness.ca

---

Sleeping with the Enemy – Is Safe Sex Possible?

By Dr. Ian Urquhart

Money – what environmental group ever has enough? Today the search for this lifeblood may tempt environmental NGOs to partner with corporations in order to secure the resources needed to try to influence public policy and corporate behaviour.

In this year's lecture, Dr. Urquhart considers whether those who take this course mortally wound the authenticity of their policy critiques and what alternative tacks may be available to the conservation community.

---

Biography
Dr. Ian Urquhart

Dr. Ian Urquhart has taught in the Department of Political Science at the University of Alberta since 1987. When he is not chasing trout in Alberta's foothills, he studies the politics of resource exploitation in Alberta. He is the editor of Assault on the Rockies: Environmental Controversies in Alberta (1998) and the co-author of The Last Great Forest: Japanese Multinationals and Alberta's Northern Forests (1996). Among his other publications is Making It Work: Kyoto, Trade and Polecats, a research report published in 2002 by the Parkland Institute at the University of Alberta.

